

A Day In The City Center

By Jack Heinz

9.00 A.M.

The City Center Is empty except for the workers preparing for the day to start.

12:00 P.M.

The weekly farmer's Market is going on and a family picks out fresh produce as they walk around.

3:00 P.M.

People walk around and shop as the day goes on.

6:00 P.M.

The City Center that was once empty, now has people enjoying their dinner, and has children playing in the water.

9.00 P.M.

People have emptied out of the city center and it is now closing time for the shops in it.

12:00 A.M.

Now that the day is over, the only light that is shown at the City Center is the sign displaying its logo.
